As educator/organizers, we must be humble and learn from our colleagues.
Based on our expanded understanding, we need to organize with others to change the world.
We need opportunities to connect our personal experience to national and global realities.
We need opportunities to reflect on our personal experience and identify community problems.
Feelings and emotions are an important part of learning. We learn with head, heart, and body.
We learn more when we are having fun!
We need to create situations where people can learn the skills they need to work collectively.
People should be active participants (not passive recipients) in their own learning process.
We all know a lot. We should always start with what people know and do.
It is important to create an atmosphere of trust so people can share their ideas and experiences.
